

Spring

(from YEAR)

Kenneth Goldsmith

For Alan Licht

Oh, we are looking at, uh, weather, uh, across, uh, Iraq obviously here for the next several days, uh, we have, uh, actually some good, good weather is expected. They did have a sandstorm here earlier, uh, over the last 12 to 24 hours those winds have subsided and will actually continue to subside. Uh, there will be enough of a wind across the southern portion of the country that still may cause some blowing sand tomorrow. Otherwise we're looking at clear to partly cloudy skies tonight and tomorrow, uh, the weekend, uh, it is good weather and then we could have a storm, uh, generating some strong winds, uh, for Sunday night and Monday, uh, even the possibility of a little rain in Baghdad. Uh, currently we have, uh uh, increasing cloudiness, uh, forecast locally tonight, uh, it's gonna be brisk and chilly, temperatures getting down into the middle 30s and then some, uh, intermittent rain is expected tomorrow and tomorrow night. It'll become steadier and heavier late in the day and, uh, actually a pretty good soaking tomorrow night. Uh, temperatures getting into the mid-40s tomorrow and then staying in the 40s tomorrow night. Friday it's a breezy and warmer day but, uh, still a few more showers maybe even a thunderstorm, the high of 60 degrees. Currently we have sunshine and 44 with an east wind of 10. Repeating the current temperature 44, going up to 46 in midtown.

We still have clouds, we still have some fog outside of the city this morning but, uh, during the afternoon the sky can brighten, the sun can peek on through, temperatures get on up into the 60s. A couple of showers and maybe a thunderstorm this evening and then the weekend to follow looks pretty good. At least partly sunny, it'll be breezy tomorrow, the high about 60 and in the, uh, 50s for a high on Sunday. As for Middle East weather, it continues to be favorable for military operations and that'll remain the case through Sunday but Monday and Tuesday there may be another episode of strong winds, poor visibilities, and, uh, even some sandstorms. Right now 57 and cloudy in Central Park, temperature today going up to 62.

Well, Susan, sunshine will be mixing with clouds as we go through the day today. It is going to be on the mild side again this afternoon, the high up to 64 degrees in midtown today. Tonight, we're partly cloudy, dropping back to a low of 42. We're gonna stay dry tomorrow and Monday as well. Partly to mostly sunny skies, highs in the mid to upper 50s and then back to 64 for a high on Tuesday with increasing clouds. No chance of rain in sight until we get to the day Wednesday. Dry weather in Baghdad for the rest of the weekend as well, partly cloudy skies Saturday night and also some sunshine across Baghdad on Sunday. Right now it's 54 degrees and sunny in Central Park. We're going up to 64 in midtown today.

With sunshine, the temperature's headed on up to 61 for the high this afternoon, partly to mostly cloudy tonight the, or clear to partly cloudy tonight, I should say, the low 46 in midtown, 40 in many suburbs. Tomorrow another mild day, going towards 64 with sunshine. Then a cold front will arrive Wednesday with a couple of showers, high 60. Rain could follow Wednesday night and Thursday morning if that front stalls and a low pressure area forms along it. Afterwards, Thursday afternoon, high 54 with some sunshine. In Iraq the winds are likely to be picking up in the next 24 hours, raising more sand and dust into the atmosphere and that's going to be a problem through Wednesday. Things should settle down after that, after the current storm from the Mediterranean moves past. Currently, the winds are light and variable, the relative humidity 46%. 55 in midtown heading for 61.

Sandy, a nice evening. Clear to partly cloudy skies overnight, we'll be in the mid-40s come daybreak, uh, tomorrow another mild day but, uh, clouds and, uh, limited sun, a couple of showers around associated with a cold front which'll be moving through especially in the afternoon and evening. Clears out later tomorrow night and Thursday and Friday lots of sunshine and only, uh, a bit cooler. 54 Thursday, 58 Friday. The battlefield forecast, uh, the weather is nasty over there right now. Strong winds accompanying a powerful cold front, uh, really kicking up the sand and making for poor visibility. Uh, that wind speed will gradually come down over the next twenty-four hours but it'll still be causing some problems. Rain, in mountains; snow, in northern Iraq on Wednesday. A couple of showers still down in Baghdad. Uh, then better weather Thursday right on through the weekend. Back home we have 57 in Caldwell, 53 and sunshine in Central Park, the southeast wind at 11. Repeating the current temperature 53 going down to 47 in midtown.

Well, not much on the WINS DopplerRadar. Literally, just one shower up over northern Bergen County and also over northeastern Morris County and as they move off to the northeast the balance of this afternoon is on the dry side so you really don't need the umbrella for the most part here. 68 degrees for the afternoon high. What we'll see in terms of showers will be for the evening rush hour through the remainder of this evening but already by daybreak the clouds are parting company in the wake of our most recent cool front. We're in at 40 degrees. And, yeah, we're gonna cool it, now that's what a front does. Despite the sun back there'll be a breeze tomorrow, high 56. Sunshine, patchy clouds Friday with a high of 58 degrees. As for our battlefield forecast, one or two showers left over the northern two-thirds of, uh, Iraq during the course of this evening but better weather ahead later tonight and over the next couple of days as the wind dies down. Around here, not much wind. It's 70 in Morristown, 66 Belmar, 64 and partly sunny in Central Park going to 68 in midtown.

James, we look for sunshine to be with us, uh, all day today and temperatures will respond and get up to about the 60 degree mark and then it'll be partly cloudy tonight, low 44. Increasing clouds tomorrow, a little cooler thanks to a breeze coming in off the water. High tomorrow 56. Rain at times Saturday, Saturday night, ending Sunday morning but brisk and, uh, pretty cool the rest of the day Sunday with the temperature not getting much at all above 50. Weather conditions in Iraq, uh, and Kuwait have improved, ur, improved considerably over the last 24 hours. Skies are clear, visibilities are much better, winds are much, much lighter and it does not look like weather is going to be, uh, any kind of a major player for at least the next few days. Around these parts it's 45 and sunny in Central Park, temperature today going up to 60.

Sunshine still with us and temperature still climbing and it should get to 60 and even into the 60s today. It'll be coolest on the south shore of Long Island and the Connecticut coast with a southerly breeze coming in off the water. Then it clouds up tonight, could start to drizzle. We get drizzle and rain at times tomorrow, especially tomorrow night on into Sunday morning, could be some heavy rain and maybe a thunderstorm. The rain, um, er, probably at least the steady rain, ends Sunday morning but there still may be some rain showers around Sunday afternoon and it will be noticeably colder with temperatures no higher than the 40s. Right now, though, uh, it is 56 degrees and sunny in Central Park and the temperature today going up to, uh, about 60.

Brisk and cold today, clouds and sunshine. We're going to have a high temperature near 42 degrees and for the Mets home opener it's the AccuWeather RealFeel temperature upper 20s and low 30s so definitely a bundle-up time, but a dry afternoon. Partly to mostly cloudy tonight, low 30 in midtown, 24 in outlying areas. Tomorrow turns out cloudy and as a warm front approaches we'll have some rain in the afternoon, could start as a little wet snow but the temperature by end of the day 44 northern suburbs, 50 in central Jersey, well up in the 40s in the city. Wednesday variable cloudiness, with a shower possible, high 50, then into the 50s with a few showers on Thursday. Meanwhile on the battlefield, sunshine, 70s today but 90s by the end of the week in many areas. Currently in midtown 32 degrees, relative humidity 51%, wind west northwest at 12. 32 heading for 42.

That's exactly right, Judy. Clouds thickening over the next couple of hours then we expect some rain during the midday and early afternoon hours, could be some wet snow mixed in in the beginning but it won't stick. High today 42, tonight's low 40. Tomorrow some clouds and sun, perhaps a shower, high 54. Then we'll be close to the boundary between cool air and warm air on Thursday and Friday. We're calling Thursday clouds and sunshine, maybe a shower, high 59. Then Friday partly sunny and warmer, high 68 degrees with a thunderstorm possibility in the afternoon. On the battlefield, temperatures in the 80s in the afternoon hours through midweek, getting closer to 100 as we close out the week. Currently in midtown 33 degrees, relative humidity 49%, wind north at 5 miles per hour. 33 heading for 42.

James it is.. I'm sorry Lee... we'll call you Lee, Lee, uh, it looks like the next couple of days we're gonna be close to a boundary between warm air with temperatures in the 70s from Philadelphia southward. However, upstate New York it probably stays in the 30s and 40s. Hopefully we get into the 50s today and tomorrow with a few breaks of sunshine. Central New Jersey and on, uh, inland it can get into the 60s. It can always sprinkle or shower but, uh, at least through tomorrow we're not looking for much in the way of rain. Friday rather cloudy, cool, high in the 50s, uh, chance of showers, maybe a late day thunderstorm. And then pretty cool on Saturday, may not get above 50 with some rain likely. Sunday partly sunny but chilly with a high of 48. Right now it is 45 and mostly cloudy in Central Park, temperature today going up to 54.

A mostly cloudy cool day coming up today, the temperature will get to about 50 or maybe or maybe the low 50s and that's about it, drop back to about 40 with some clouds and patchy fog and drizzle tonight. Then it'll start to rain tomorrow, probably late in the day we'll have rain tomorrow night on into the day on Saturday with a high Saturday into the 50s. No, uh, genuine prospects for sunshine until Sunday but even then it'll be chilly, a high around 50. Uh, battlefield weather is sunny and hot in, uh, Baghdad, the temperature into the low 90s at this moment and it'll be middle to upper 90s tomorrow and over the weekend with 100 degrees plus in the southern and eastern deserts. Some gusty winds over the weekend could cause isolated pockets of, uh, blowing sand and reduced visibilities but nothing near as widespread as last week. Right now it's 44 and mostly cloudy in Central Park, temperature today going up to about 50.

James, it's going to be overcast, drizzly with some fog today. We'll have drizzle, rain and fog tonight and tomorrow, uh, temperature today not going to go up much, it may even drop a couple of degrees and the lows tonight will be near 30 in the northern and western suburbs and that means there can be some freezing rain as well as just rain. High temperatures tomorrow 45 to 50. Sunday mostly sunny with a high around 50. The, uh, battlefield forecast, the heat will peak Saturday with highs in Baghdad near 100, then not as hot Sunday and Monday but windy at times. Those gusty winds will pick up some sand and dust and cause areas of reduced visibility. Right now it is 41 and cloudy in Central Park and our temperature today going up only to 43.

Oh, just a damp and chilly day underway. There will be some occasional light rain and drizzle, some areas of fog and even a rumble or two of thunder. We'll have a high of just 44 degrees and then windy and cold with clearing skies tonight, low 36. A sunny but windy and chilly day with a high around 50 degrees. Monday, cloudy, windy, and cold with some snow, sleet and rain and we're probably going to be talking accumulations north and west of the city. Monday's high just 40 degrees, though, cloudy with a chance for lingering rain Tuesday, especially during the morning with a high around 50 and partly sunny Wednesday with a high around near 50 degrees. Battlefield forecast is as follows: we do have a partly cloudy sky with gusty winds over Saturday night and a mix of clouds and sun with blowing sand and dust on Sunday. It's 37 degrees right now, heading up to 44 in midtown.

We are going to have increasing and thickening clouds tonight, Laurie, and, uh, temperatures will, for the most part, be between 25 and 32 at daybreak on Monday. Then get ready for the snow. It will tend to mix with some sleet and freezing rain in some locations, uh, but we're looking at a significant accumulation, especially for this time of year. Uh, most places will get between 4 and 8 inches. We've got the winter storm warnings in effect for Monday and early Monday night. It should wind down Monday night as a few flurries and some drizzle. Still, it's going to be tough getting around tomorrow so allow yourself some extra time. The high tomorrow in the mid-30s, Monday night's low about 30 degrees. And it's going to be cloudy on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday and on the cool side. The battlefield forecast, Baghdad tomorrow could be a rain or, uh, thunderstorm, uh, shower. Temperatures will be in the upper 80s. It'll be hotter Tuesday. Back home 41 in midtown right now. Clear, relative humidity 44%, the wind northeast 7 miles per hour. Clear and 41 heading down to 32.

It's getting closer and closer now. It is now snowing now in Hunterdon and Somerset counties, parts of southern Morris and Union counties as well, and the snow is spreading eastward. It will spread across the metropolitan area within the next hour to two hours and then we look for heavy snow this afternoon and on into this evening. An average accumulation across the metropolitan area 4 to 8 inches. Keep in mind during the day today, during the daylight hours, temperatures high enough so that a lot of the snow is going to melt, at least initially on city streets and highways and parkways but they can get slushy and slippery in spots for sure, uh, there can even be, uh, a few extra inches in the hilly areas north and west of Interstate 287 but an average, we think, of four to six or eight inches across most of the tri-state area. Right now it's 36 and cloudy in Central Park. Temperature today going down to 32.

Well, a cloudy day today, uh, there's been a little drizzle, there's been a little freezing drizzle, there'll continue to be a little drizzle at times, uh, during the day today with a high of 36. We look for some rain, eh, at time tonight and tomorrow. Low tonight 34 and the high tomorrow 40. It's cloudy Thursday, there's still the chance for some rain, a high in the 40s. And then we may have a major storm, uh, even a nor'easter come up the eastern seaboard Friday, Friday night into Saturday morning, odds favor rain, coastal areas and maybe some gusty winds as well, high tides and all of that, clearing beginning later on Saturday. Right now it's 31 and cloudy in Central Park, temperature today going up to 36.

James, we've got rain all across the metropolitan area now, there's been a little bit of sleet that's bounced around but this is, uh, mostly just a cold, wet, nasty rain and it'll rain pretty steadily into the middle part of the afternoon with, uh, a high of 38. Clouds tonight, low 34. Variable cloudiness tomorrow, perhaps a few brighter intervals, and, uh, if we, uh, get even a little bit of sun the temperature tomorrow will get into the 40s. Clouds, rain and wind back for Friday, in fact, could be pretty stormy. Friday afternoon and Friday night, with winds gusting, perhaps to 40 miles an hour. Clearing begins Saturday afternoon and Sunday looks mostly sunny and pleasant with a high near 60. Right now it's 35 and cloudy in Central Park, temperature today going up to 38.

Well it will be a cool and breezy day today but no rain, and although there'll be a lot of clouds, uh, the sun will peek out from time to time in place to place and that gets temperatures into the 40s for the first time all week long. Tomorrow, though, a rainy windy day, uh, windy, chilly with temperatures in the low to middle 40s and some of the rain, tomorrow, tomorrow night will be heavy enough to cause street and highway flooding. It clears on Saturday and Sunday looks good, mostly sunny and the high 56 to 60. Iraqi weather has cooled down. It'll be dry through the weekend, relatively comfortable, 60s in the northern part of the country and, uh, no higher than the 80s in Baghdad. Right now Central Park, 40 degrees and cloudy, the high today 48.

Well, it's not very nice outside and it's not going to get a whole lot, uh, in fact, probably not going to get any better as we go through the day. We're going to have rain intermittent today and tonight and into tomorrow morning, some of the rain will be heavy, eh, other times the rain can stop completely. And there will also continue to be a gusty wind, that wind gusting frequently to 30 miles per hour and occasionally to between 30 and 40 miles per hour. The temperature not much above 40 so not only is it wet, but it's kind of nasty and cold. Clearing tomorrow afternoon, though, and with the sun coming out, temperatures will jump into the 50s and then Sunday should be mostly sunny with a high around 60. But right now it's 40 and raining in Central Park and that wind out of the northeast, gusting to 29 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 40, going up to 44 today.

Uh, thank you very much. It looks like the rain has ended in New York City. It should be ending across Long Island in the next couple of hours. Clouds will break for sunshine from west to east across the area. We'll have a high of 60. Mostly clear, brisk, cold tonight, low falling back to about 42. It'll be mostly sunny tomorrow, the high of 58. Partial sunshine, nice day for your Monday, high 64. Sunshine, breezy turning much warmer for Tuesday, with the high of 73 degrees. Currently 54 degrees in Bridgeport, some rain out in Islip, 51. In Central Park, 57 degrees, relative humidity 74%. Wind out the north northwest at 10 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 57 going up to 60 in midtown.

Well, the region will be basking in plenty of sunshine that'll be overhead via the area of high pressure that moved in over the last twelve to twenty-four hours. A breezy and nice afternoon with the high of 58 degrees. Clear and cool tonight, low 40 midtown, 34 in the suburbs. And we'll see more in the way of sunshine as we head through the middle part of the week, temperatures actually moderating as we head through the day on Monday and Tuesday. Breezy Monday, high 64. Windy Tuesday with a high of 76 degrees. Sunshine, patchy clouds, breezy and warm, a high again of 76. 46 degrees and sunny in Central Park, humidity 58%, wind north at 3 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 46, we're headed up to 58 in midtown.

Ah, still a dazzling day out there with bright sunshine, temperatures are, uh, almost to 50 degrees right now and we expect them to top out into the 60s today. It will be a gentle sea breeze that keeps shore points cooler but then, uh, tonight will be, uh, fair and relatively mild with a low about 50 and tomorrow, a gusty southwest wind combines with sunshine and temperatures tomorrow will be off to the races, 80 or above inland areas, probably at least 78 or 80 in midtown. Cooler on the south shore of Long Island and the Connecticut coast where the breeze comes in off the water. Still warm Wednesday but could be a late day thunderstorm and then it will be noticeably cooler Thursday and Friday, both of those days, eh, probably clouds and the chance of rain and the high temperatures not much above 50. Right now, though, 48 and bright and sunny in Central Park, temperature today going up to 64.

Well for today and tomorrow, it will seem like we have sprung right past spring and into summer, but by the end of the week – by Thursday and Friday – we will have fallen back toward winter. But today and tomorrow, if you're a warm weather fan, will be to your liking. Sunshine, patchy clouds, a gusty southwest wind and in midtown as well as in adjacent New Jersey and the Hudson Valley, temperatures will climb to between 80 and 85, while it stays closer to 70 on the south shore of Long Island and the Connecticut coast. Thursday, though, we turn things around. The cold front passes through Wednesday night that could produce a shower or a thunderstorm and Thursday and Friday will be noticeably chillier with clouds, uh, some drizzle or rain and temperatures no higher than the 40s. Right now, though, we're already 53 and mostly sunny in Central Park, the temperature today going up to 81.

We've got one more for you, James, but then quite a dramatic change tomorrow, but for the rest of the day today sunshine, a few patchy high clouds, a gusty breeze out of the southwest and high temperatures getting to between 80 and 85 in midtown, across most of New Jersey and up the Hudson Valley. Long Island will be cooler, especially the south shore. Maybe a shower tonight and it will turn colder overnight with a low near 40 and a dramatically colder day tomorrow, some 40 degrees colder than today with afternoon temperatures no higher than the 40s. Remaining cloudy, chilly Friday, chance for some rain, clouds breaking for some sun Saturday up to 56 and Easter Sunday looks OK, partly sunny with a high of 62. Right now, 67 and sunshine in Central Park, temperature today going up to 83.

Well, once again WINS LiveScan DopplerRadar showing some of the, er, showers right along the, uh, Essex, Union county line just off to the north of Interstate 78 crossing, eh, 280, eh, once you get, eh, past, eh, West Orange, eh, Livingston in through that corridor as well as, eh, Bloomfield, Caldwell, so if you're in through this corridor, you've definitely got some wet weather to contend with as well as, uh, well, southern areas of Brooklyn down along the, um, er, well, down along the Belt Parkway quite honestly, once you get, eh, south of, eh, Linden Boulevard we have, uh, a couple of showers to contend with. We'll also get a little sun this afternoon, but, oh, that cold wind means business with the high of 46 degrees and while it may drizzle tonight and tomorrow, well, most of the time it's just going to be cloudy, cold. 36 tonight, 50 tomorrow, even Saturday's a damp start but we should see a little late day sun with the high of 58, so at least it does turn somewhat milder. Right now, though, it's only 39 Bellmar, 43 with the clouds Central Park, only going to 46 this afternoon in midtown.

James, uh, a cloudy, chilly and brisk day, uh, temperature this afternoon will only be in the 40s. The wind will still be gusting to about 20 miles an hour. There can be a bit of drizzle, there can be bit of rain. The same goes for tonight and on into tomorrow morning. After that we do look for a slow improvement. The sky brightens tomorrow afternoon, the sun may come out, temperatures get into the 50s and then Easter Sunday looks OK. Mixed clouds and sun, the sunrise temperature about 45, the afternoon high on Sunday should be into the 60s. Right now, though, it's 38 and cloudy in Central Park, humidity at 92%, wind from the east, gusting to 21 miles an hour. Repeating the current temperature 38, going up to 48 today.

Well, Susan, it's shaping up to be a pretty nice day across the tri-state area. So far lots of sunshine, uh, this morning, it looks like the sunshine will be sticking around through much of the day and with that sunshine temperatures up near 60 degrees in midtown for the afternoon. We stay dry tonight with clear to partly cloudy skies. Tomorrow's partly sunny as well and the high goes back up to 60 in the afternoon after a sunrise temperature tomorrow morning of 48 degrees. Clouds do return to the area Monday and then Monday night into Tuesday and we could see some rain. Monday's high 64, Tuesday's high 60. Currently sunny and 43 degrees in Central Park, the humidity 70% and the wind east at 10 miles an hour. Again the current temperature 43. It'll go up to 60 in midtown.

Uh, mostly cloudy skies here for the remainder of the night. We'll see a few showers during the course of the night, maybe even a little fog develop, uh, with temperatures drifting down, uh, into the middle 40s. And then a mostly cloudy day Tuesday as a front slowly works its way through the region, uh, this will generate a few showers, you may even hear a few rumbles of thunder. High temperature around 59. There's going to be a storm developing on that front and that's why the wet weather for tomorrow and that storm lifts up through New England, uh, later tomorrow night and Wednesday and deepens and the net result is that the wind'll pick up out of the northwest. It'll be cool, uh, well get some, uh, clearing.

Temperatures in the mid-40s tomorrow night, Wednesday around 56. Thursday still kind of windy but skies will be partly sunny, about 60 degrees and then a nice day Friday. Currently in Central Park cloudy and 49 degrees with a south wind at 7.

Repeating the current temperature 49 going down to 46 in midtown.

Indeed it is dreary and dull, damp and dim. It's been this way since the day's dawn. Will it stay this way 'til its dreary and dull dim demise after dinner? We'll have to see but, if you live in eastern Nassau or Suffolk county, watch for some rain that's going to come ashore in about 15 or 20 minutes and sprinkle the area for about an hour. Rest of the area not too much in the way of showers the next couple of hours but there will be some more later today. Parts of the area can still have a thunderstorm, high 59. A leftover shower tomorrow tonight, low 46, then tomorrow becoming partly sunny. Cool winds, gusty winds, temperatures won't get out of the 50s. Thursday looks like a nice day, still windy, high 64. Friday sunshine, more tranquil, a high 66. Currently 47 degrees, relative humidity 100%, winds out of the northeast at 8 miles per hour. 47 heading to 59.

We'll have a mixture of clouds and sunshine today, a gusty wind. It's going to be cool, temperature getting to about 58 this afternoon then clearing, windy and chilly tonight, low 42 in midtown, 34 in some suburbs. Now, as the high pressure area that's now in the Midwest moves toward us, tomorrow will be a sunny day with a gusty wind but milder, high 64 late in the day as the high pressure area moves offshore. Friday looks nice to start followed by increasing cloudiness, high 66. And a storm that's causing rain to spread across Kansas, Oklahoma, and Nebraska today can reach us with rain Friday night into Saturday, Saturday's high 56. Currently it's 46, relative humidity 62%. Winds out of the west at 10 gusting to 18. 46 heading for, to, 58.

Well, uh, Cheryl, the, uh, current 1010 WINS DopplerRadar filling in across the tri-state area, we're seeing, uh, fairly light rainfall right now but we're anticipating that the intensity of the rain will be picking up very late tonight and tomorrow morning, uh, so a soggy Saturday definitely, uh, if you have some chores to do this weekend indoors, tomorrow would be the day to do them and I think that Sunday if you want to get outside it'll be a much nicer day but we're gonna be dealing with this storm system for the next 24 hours or so. The low overnight in midtown with the rain 48, tomorrow's high only 52 but as the rain comes to an end, probably tomorrow evening as some drizzle, you should see some late night clearing Sunday, it'll be a bit on the windy side but with sunshine, highs will reach the mid and upper 60s. Monday also will be about 68. Our next shot at getting a shower Tuesday. Cloudy, 52 in midtown. Right now relative humidity 89%, the wind variable, 6 miles per hour. Cloudy, 52. We're heading down to 48.

Good morning Susan. It's kind of a windy, wet, cool start to this weekend, in fact, uh, today looks like, eh, kind of a washout. Occasional rain, in fact the rain can come down hard enough we could see a little bit of street and highway flooding, the high 56. Tonight drizzle in the evening then partial clearing, a low 48. What a big improvement for Sunday with bright sunshine a high of 70 degrees, sunny to partly cloudy, up to 74 on Monday. Uh, Tuesday it'll stay warm. We'll still go into the mid-70s but there is a chance for a shower. Right now we have 49 in White Plains, it's 47 in Bridgeport. Cloudy and 50 in Central Park with a humidity of 100%, the winds east at 9. Repeating the current temperature 50 going up to 56 today.

Well it looks like our weather will be just beautiful for today, Monday looking nice, Tuesday even looks pretty nice, uh, even though a cold front will come through by then that could trigger a shower but today just sunshine and a high of 68. Clear and comfortable tonight, 54 in midtown, 42 in the suburbs. We'll go up to 76 with the sunshine tomorrow. Cooler on the coast and on the Island. And on Tuesday, intervals of clouds and sun as a cold front approaches the region, maybe a shower, the high 74. Currently we have 50 degrees in Bridgeport and White Plains partly sunny 52 in Central Park, 89% humidity and northwest wind at 9. 52 right now going up to 68.

We'll take it, huh, Brian? This is a beautiful day and, uh, actually we got nice weather for much of the, uh, coming week, uh, we've got, uh, mostly clear skies tonight, temperatures heading for the mid, upper 50s, uh, even warmer tomorrow, 82 under a partly sunny sky. Uh, we will cool it down a little bit on Wednesday, there's going to be a front slipping through here tomorrow morning, uh, Wednesday will be in the upper 60s. But that's still a nice day, lots of sunshine. Thursday partly sunny and 68. Friday, low 70s, uh, cloudy to partly sunny on Friday and that's our first chance of seeing a shower or thunderstorm as there will be a cold front moving through probably Friday evening. Right now 66 at JFK with a sea breeze, 76 in Central Park, sunny and a south wind at 20 miles an hour. Repeating the current temperature 76 going down to 58 in midtown.

Uh, we have Brian, uh, it's, uh, a very small area of some light rain it's, uh, gonna be over very very shortly as a matter of fact in the city and, uh, mmm, looking at definitely less than a tenth of an inch, uh, so it's just enough, uh, to hold the dust down. Uh, the clouds leave in part for some sunshine once again for the late afternoon hours. Uh, temperatures obviously have cooled off here with the rain falling and we will bounce back into at least the lower 70s here once, uh, uh, the clouds break up once again. Uh, the evening hours will be nice and then tonight will be clear to partly cloudy a low of 52. Next couple of days, uh, some nice weather, lots of sunshine 68 tomorrow, partly sunny on Thursday with a high around 70 degrees. Uh, do expect to see some showers, maybe a thunderstorm in the, uh, Thursday night, Friday time period, that'll be the next, uh, front. Uh, could even be, uh, some steadier rain, uh, Friday night into Saturday as a storm develops along that frontal boundary, then we'll start to clear out Saturday afternoon. Sunday should be nice. In Central Park reporting some light rain and we've cooled off to 60 degrees. Uh, still a northwest wind 15 to 25 miles an hour. Repeating the current temperature 60 going up to 79 in midtown.

Fine day today. Cloudiness and some sunshine. There are a couple of showers, uh, 20 to 30 miles north of the city that'll bypass and we're going to have a very nice afternoon. Uh, high temperature 68, partly cloudy tonight low 52 as the front moves south of us yesterday with a shower in the afternoon moves back north as a warm front tomorrow. Can't rule out a shower but overall clouds and sunny breaks, the high 70. Friday clouds and some sun, a warm day high 72. Showers and thunderstorms possible especially in the afternoon to tonight. Saturday looks like it'll start damp but then turn partly sunny in the afternoon, high 62. Currently winds out of the north at 4 miles per hour, the relative humidity a low 43%. 55 in midtown heading for 68.

Well, cloudiness today there will be some showers around, they can occur just about any time, one batch of showers has gone by but new ones are forming southwest. High 66 degrees, cooler on the south shore of Long Island and coastal Connecticut. Part to mostly cloudy breezy tonight low 58. Tomorrow clouds wrap some sunny breaks. Breezy and warm but a pushing cold front can cause showers and thunderstorms just about any time best chance is the afternoon and night. High 72 now. Assuming the front leaves, chance of morning rain then clearing Saturday. Front stalls all bets are off on clearing. High Saturday 60. Sunday looks to be sunny, high 64. Currently in midtown, relative humidity 92%, wind is out of the north at 4 miles per hour. It's 54 degrees heading for 66.

It's a mild morning. It's going to be a warm day today, the temperatures likely to climb well into the 70s. Lots of sunshine for a while then cloudiness during the course of the afternoon there can be a thunderstorm, any thunderstorm that develops can be strong and gusty. Temperature today climbing well into the 70s. Then for tonight clouds and a few showers and a thunderstorm then tomorrow turning cooler, some sun by afternoon. Low tonight 52, high tomorrow 60. Sunday looks like a sunny cool day, high 64. Monday partly sunny, high 64. Currently the winds out of the east at 4 miles per hour, the relative humidity 80%. 62 degrees heading well up into the 70s this afternoon before cool air arrives.

Well, I suppose some folks might like it just a little warmer but, uh, it's still going to be very nice for early May today. We'll see sunshine, some clouds, a high of 64. It'll mainly be clear and chilly tonight, we'll go down to 38 in some of those colder suburbs, you know who you are, uh, down to about 48 in midtown. Sunshine followed by clouds tomorrow, still a cool breeze with a high of 62, mostly cloudy with a cool breeze Tuesday. Showers, maybe an afternoon thunderstorm the high 60 to 64. Warmer on Wednesday but still a chance for a thunderstorm. Right now partly sunny 51 in Central Park. It's 49 at Kennedy and also at LaGuardia. It's 51 at Central Park and it's going up to 64.

We're gonna have increasing cloudiness today as that massive storm system from the middle of the country comes eastward, uh, we do not believe the risk of tornadic thunderstorms is, uh, very high here but we're gonna get some rain starting either late this afternoon or early this evening. We'll have off and on rain tonight and on into tomorrow. And it'll be kind of cool with a breeze coming in off the water. Today it can get to 60 or a little bit above but highs tomorrow not too far into the 50s. It'll get warmer Wednesday, clouds can break for some sun, could also be a shower or a thunderstorm, high Wednesday 73 and then mostly cloudy on Thursday, high in the 60s. Right now it's 54 and partly sunny in Central Park. Temperature today going up to 60.

James, it's a gray, kind of a drizzly morning and it's gonna stay that way all day, uh, there will be drizzle every now and then there could be enough rain to form a puddle and to wet things down. The same goes for tonight, also areas of fog and that fog could become pretty thick in places, uh, as we get into tonight and tomorrow morning. Temperatures today get into the 50s but, eh, probably not the 60s. Tomorrow we'll get milder, into the 60s, uh, then there's, uh, a period of rain and maybe a thunderstorm tomorrow night into, into, eh, Thursday morning followed by a dry period Thursday afternoon into Friday but maybe more showers again later Friday. So, stringing a long period of dry weather and certainly stringing a couple of sunny days in this weather pattern together is gonna be pretty tough. Right now it's 48 and cloudy. Central Park, the temperature today going up to 58.

It's cloudy and gray but not much going on in terms of precipitation. We'll have a couple of showers around today, mostly this morning but the vast majority of the time we'll just see clouds, high 66. Partly to mostly cloudy tonight, low 54. Tomorrow a little brighter. Clouds and sunny breaks, high about 68 degrees and Saturday should also be partly sunny though a shower can't be ruled out, high 68. Showers a better bet for Sunday maybe a thunderstorm. High temperature 68 on Mother's Day. Currently winds out of the east at 7 miles per hour, the relative humidity 96%. 58 degrees in midtown heading for 66.

And what we have here tonight, Brian, is, uh, looks like, uh, dry weather from this point on. The light shower activity that, uh, was over the region is, uh, now moved offshore, uh, partly to mostly cloudy skies, temperatures in the low to middle 50s at daybreak, uh, tomorrow little bit of sunshine and a milder afternoon. Upper 60s to low 70s for a high. Maybe, uh, a shower, thunderstorm also in the afternoon or evening hours but better chance for showers and th, uh, thunderstorms coming along later Sunday afternoon, Sunday night, that from a strong storm, which is, uh, still back in the Rockies right now. It'll be moving into Kansas tomorrow morning and then up into the Great Lakes on Sunday and, uh, sweeping, uh, a strong cold front over toward the East Coast. A high on Sunday around 64. Currently we have 63 degrees, a cloudy sky, a southwest wind at 8. Repeating the current temperature 63 going down to 54 in midtown.

Mostly cloudy skies overnight, uh, temperatures in the mid-50s come daybreak and our Sunday will also be mostly cloudy with a couple of rounds of showers and thunderstorms, mainly during the afternoon and early evening as a strong cold front, uh, sweeps over to the eastern seaboard. A high temperature around 65. Gusty winds and cool conditions both Monday and Tuesday. Intervals of clouds and sunshine, just the possibility of a shower either day. 68 degrees on Monday, 66 on Tuesday. Wednesday lighter winds and partly sunny with a high of around 68. Currently we have 56 at JFK, 64, mostly cloudy in Central Park, a south wind at 5 to 10. Repeating the current temperature 64 going down the 56 in midtown.

We'll continue to have that patchy dense fog around the area this morning. That should burn off over the next couple of hours. Then the next threat comes in this afternoon as we have some locally heavy thunderstorms that will move through the area, especially to the west of the city. We'll have a high today of about 70 degrees. Evening showers, thunderstorm tonight then clearing, breezy turning cooler with a low falling back to 53. Both tomorrow and Tuesday will be windy with times of fog and sunshine, could see a shower either day with highs in the mid to upper 60s. And as we look ahead to Wednesday, a partly sunny, pleasant day with a high of 68. Dense fog at White Plains right now 56 degrees. 58 degrees at Islip. In Central Park, 61 degrees, relative humidity 93% and the winds east, northeast at 7 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 61 going up to 70 in midtown.

Well, a glance at the WINS Doppler Radar not much out there but a couple of showers most notable, just off to the south of Danbury, Connecticut and also, uh, kind of sandwiched in between the Garden State Parkway and 287, eh, coming down through, eh, Bergen, Passaic, as well as Essex, Morris counties, Union, in through that area. But again, it's more miss than hit. We'll have clouds and limited sun this afternoon with the high of 68 degrees. What we're going to notice tonight is the increase in the wind, lock stock and barrel. Low temperature 52 degrees and when I say it's a bad hair day tomorrow, that's an understatement on my part here. Clouds, limited sun, maybe an afternoon shower. Forget the umbrella. High 66. Wednesday will take the wind down a notch, partly sunny with the high 68. It's currently 70 Belmar, 60 with the clouds in Central Park, going to 68 this afternoon in midtown.

James, we're starting out today O.K. with, uh, mixed clouds and sun. We think as the day wears on there will tend to be more in the way of cloud cover. We're still under the circulation of large storm system which is centered, uh, northern New York state over the Adirondacks. And that could produce a shower or two as we go through this afternoon and this evening. Showers mostly of the brief variety. High today 64 then clearing late tonight, low 52. Sunshine in pretty good supply tomorrow. That should be a nice day, high 68. Increasing clouds Thursday and some rain again Thursday night and Friday. Right now it's 52 and partly sunny in Central Park, temperature today going up to 64.

A better today, James, although it's not going to stay completely sunny. There will be cloudy intervals and there will still be a cool breeze. But with the sun out at least at times, temperatures get into the 60s, probably the upper 60s this afternoon. Then it'll be fair and cool tonight, low around 50. Increasing clouds tomorrow and we do look for some rain again as we get into tomorrow night and during the day Friday. And a cool day Friday, with a breeze coming in off the ocean, temperatures only in the 50s. However we are optimistic about improving weather for the weekend. Gradual clearing Saturday, high 62 and partly to mostly sunny on Sunday, high 68. Right now it's 54 partly sunny in Central Park, temperature today going up to 68.

We still have sunshine and, uh, temperatures are getting into the 60s now and although clouds will increase as we go through the afternoon, it'll still be comfortable with temperatures, uh, getting close to 70 or at least on well up into the 60s. However the increasing clouds, the result of a storm which is in the Ohio Valley now, that storm is going to hit the eastern seaboard tomorrow and intensify and, around these parts, tomorrow is not looking like a nice day. Rain, some of it heavy, tomorrow and tomorrow night, ending Saturday morning. There'll also be gusty winds out of the east. They will be strong enough to raise concerns about some coastal flooding at the time of high tide tomorrow and tomorrow night. The atmosphere will dry Saturday afternoon. Sunday looks good, mostly sunny with a high of 68. Right now it is 62 and sunny in Central Park, temperature today going up to 68.

Yeah, that's a good way to put it. Radar right now showing a little bit of light rain across Staten Island on further south and west and that'll be about where it stays for the overnight hours into the first part of tomorrow morning a low 48 degrees. Then later tomorrow, still gusty winds, still fairly cold, drizzle to start then little bit breaks of sunshine, a high around 60. Lingering clouds and some late night fog tomorrow night, low 48. Here comes the improvement on Sunday, turning out mostly sunny, noticeably milder with a high of 68 degrees. Plenty of sunshine on Monday with a high of 74 and partly sunny and real nice on Tuesday, high 76. 52 right now in the Park, 54 in Newark and 53 de, er, degrees at LaGuardia. Repeating the current temperature 52 going down to 48 in midtown.

Well, a few clouds lingering south and west of the city. Turned out to be a nice sunny afternoon, north and east. Tonight no exception, uh, partly cloudy, uh, watch for some late night fog, though, a low of 46 degrees a nice day tomorrow, though, with plenty of sunshine and a high of 68. Mostly clear skies tomorrow night low 52 and another sunny day on Monday with a high of 74. Tuesday not looking too bad either, partly sunny with a high of 74 degrees. Right now in midtown 59 degrees, northeast winds at 9 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 59 going down to 46 in midtown.

It'll be mostly sunny and warm today, it's going up toward 80. A little cooler in coastal areas, then increasing clouds tonight, low 58. Tomorrow mostly cloudy with a couple of showers as a cold front arrives, high 72, then behind the front mostly cloudy and cooler. Thursday, there still could be a shower, high 64. It's going to turn rainy at the end of the week for Friday and Saturday, temperatures in the 50s to low 60s at best. Currently winds out of the northeast at 3 miles per hour, beautifully sunny, relative humidity 50%, 67 heading for 80.

Well, uh, Doug, on this Tuesday evening, 1010 WINS DopplerRadar showing a few showers to the west of the tri-state area mainly around eastern and central Pennsylvania. These are associated with a cool front that will be approaching us tomorrow. And as it does, it'll be slowing down and virtually stalling along the eastern seaboard. And, of course that doesn't bode well for our weather here for the remainder of the week. Temperatures tomorrow around 70 degrees, this despite clouds and a few showers and, uh, a wave of low pressure moving up from the southeastern United States, cruising along that nearly stationary front, I think that is what will have some very soggy implications for things around here, uh, Friday and especially Friday night, uh, temperatures Thursday expected to be no higher than the mid-60s, that's well below normal and then just as the Memorial Day weekend holiday gets started, the rain will be kicking in. Partly cloudy, 65 in midtown right now, relative humidity 36%, the wind light and variable. It's partly cloudy, 65 heading down to 58.

Well the rain has stopped from the city westbound, at least from midtown westbound, but we still find rain from Nassau eastbound, across Long Island. Looking live at 1010 WINS DopplerRadar, I can tell that it'll be a while before the rain stops in those areas. We're gonna stay wet, at least damp early tonight and late tonight, simply cloudy, we'll cool down to 52. Mostly cloudy, breezy cool weather tomorrow, rain could return to the area late in the day, a high of 60, if not late in the day then tomorrow night. We'll be dealing with the rain. That rain will continue Friday. Friday's high temperature only 58 and, yes, unfortunately it looks like rain on Saturday as well to kick off the holiday weekend, continued cool, somewhat windy, high of 60 degrees. Most of that rain should be over Sunday. Sunday mostly cloudy, high of 66. Right now it's 60, cloudy in Central Park, 96% humidity, winds variable 6 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 60 going down to 52 in midtown.

Well, Lori, we have a damp night in the tri-state area, current 1010 WINS DopplerRadar showing most of the light rain over Long Island and, uh, coastal areas but, uh, actually a bit of drizzle occurring at all the airports right now and it's cloudy in midtown, temperatures, they're not going to change much overnight. 51 right now in midtown, we're heading down to 50 and as we get the, uh, Friday started up, eh, the getaway day for the Memorial Day holiday weekend, more of this damp weather. We're waiting, actually, on a storm system organizing in Georgia right now to bring the real rain of consequence, most of that should occur Friday night and then Saturday it should stay dull and damp throughout much of the weekend, although we hold out hope for some brightening, uh, with, uh, Sunday afternoon and Monday rolling around. Right now cloudy, 51 in midtown, relative humidity 100%, the wind northeast 10 miles per hour. It's cloudy and 51, heading down to 50.

Well, the rest of this afternoon it'll be kind of dreary out there, lots of clouds, windy, cool, patchy fog, also intermittent rain and drizzle with a high of 58 degrees. Shower drizzle lingers early tonight, maybe some clearing late, patchy fog continuing, well, falling back to 54. For tomorrow, a warmer day with clouds breaks and sunshine. Could be a shower or thunderstorm in the afternoon with a high of 72 degrees. Clouds, limited sunshine for Memorial Day, couple of showers and a thunderstorm possible with a high of 64. And a chance of a shower even lingers into Tuesday. Currently in Central Park, a cloudy sky, 53 degrees, relative humidity 100% and winds out of the east at 14 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 53 going up to 58 degrees in midtown.

Well, the rain has moved away from the area, however we we'll still have a lot of clouds around tonight, kind of a damp night, patchy fog will form with a low falling back to about 50. For Tuesday a mostly cloudy day, could see an afternoon or nighttime shower, we'll have a high of 66 on Tuesday. Low on Tuesday night of 56. It continues mostly cloudy on Wednesday, couple of showers possible, high once again 56 degrees. And as we look ahead to Thursday, a little bit of sunshine, a little bit warmer, but still a chance of a shower or a thunderstorm with a high of 74 degrees. Currently 55 degrees in Newark, in Central Park a cloudy sky, 54 degrees, relative humidity 97% and a wind variable at 5 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 54 going down to 50 in midtown.

We've got a very nice morning, certainly a lot better than yesterday looked at this time. As we go through out the afternoon, we'll have an increase in cloudiness, not out of the question there's a shower, but basically it's going to remain dry now. Tonight showers are going to come in, most of them late tonight, the low 56. Tomorrow will be a rainy day at times, high 64 at best, may stay in the low 60s. Thursday, though, cloudy to partly sunny and milder, could be an afternoon shower or thunderstorm, high 74, then Friday partly sunny and breezy, high 78 degrees. Currently in midtown it's 61. The relative humidity is 72%. The wind is light and variable, still sunny but it will turn cloudy for the afternoon, 61 heading for 68.

Well, 1010 WINS DopplerRadar not showing any significant rain, uh, around the metropolitan area at this point. There might be a sprinkle over the next few hours but a little bit of a break. However there is another disturbance producing some rain in central Pennsylvania. The bulk of that will slide by to our south but a couple of showers around here this afternoon and early this evening and then then clouds linger tonight. Tomorrow we look for breaks of sunshine and that'll get temperatures into the low to maybe middle 70s tomorrow. Couple of showers, maybe a thunderstorm tomorrow afternoon and night and there may yet be a shower Friday morning. Then partly sunny, breezy during the day Friday, high about 70. Partly sunny Saturday high into the 70s but yet another chance of showers later Saturday or Saturday night. Right now it's 57 and cloudy in Central Park, humidity is 93% and the wind is calm. Repeating the current temperature 57 going up to 64 today.

This time around we've got to flip up the expanded view of WINS LiveScan DopplerRadar. We are seeing the beginnings of thunder shower activity but it's as far away as Poughkeepsie so nothing close to home just yet, still more sunshine than clouds. We'll manage 76 for a high temperature but it does go to show the fact that at least one or two neighborhoods can pick up a thunderstorm by this evening. Otherwise patchy clouds tonight, low 58. While tomorrow might start with a little bit of fog, I don't think it's going to be a scenario where we have to leave early to work or school. The balance of the day is going to be partly sunny and warm so plan accordingly. High 78. Unfortunately the clouds move in over the weekend, high 70 on Saturday and starting Saturday afternoon through the nighttime hours it is a soaker. Right now 70 in Bridgeport, 73 and mostly sunny in Central Park going to 76 this afternoon in midtown so get out and enjoy it.

Nice day today. Beautiful. Sunshine. Afternoon temperature getting to about 80. Then tonight partly cloudy low 62. Even tomorrow could start out OK but then showers and thunderstorms will visit as a cold front approaches, low pressure area will be strengthening over us. Some of the rain could wind up being heavy, some of the thunderstorms could be gusty. Tomorrow's high 70 and some more showers tomorrow night. With a storm offshore on Sunday, it'll turn into a windy cool day, plenty of cloudiness. There could be some showers left over, not out of the question, starts to clear late in the day but the main theme is windy and cool, high 68. Then Monday things start to settle down, partly sunny, high 74 degrees. Currently it's 63 in midtown, relative humidity 72%, wind out of the north at 5 miles per hour. 63 heading to 70 in time for lunch and to 80 this afternoon.

WINS DopplerRadar shows, uh, a small but fairly intense thunderstorm, uh, just west of the city now, this is just southwest of Orange and into Union and is going to be following I-78, uh, right into, uh, Elizabeth, uh, clipping, uh, probably Jersey City and the upper portion of Staten Island in a few moments, uh, you can expect some brief, heavy downpours, uh, with this particular cell. Uh, smaller and lighter showers just about to move into White Plains, uh, heading eastward and that'll eventually get into Greenwich in a few moments, uh, so we've got a little action around here this afternoon and, uh, a little later on tonight just partly cloudy skies, the low around 62. Now for tomorrow and tomorrow night as a matter of fact, mostly cloudy skies, uh, showers, they will become more numerous as we get into the afternoon, uh, some heavier thunderstorms as well and by the time this one's over, uh, we could have, uh, quite a dose of rain, uh, through Sunday morning, uh, probably three-quarters to maybe an inch-and-a-half of water, temperatures near 70 tomorrow, mid 50s tomorrow night. Sunday a very windy day on the back side of this storm. Clouds, breaks of sun and a few more showers, the high only 69. Currently we have, uh, 78 degrees with some sun in Central Park, a west wind at 5. Repeating the current temperature 78 going down to 62 in midtown.

Well, we've had a bit of a break over the last hour or so across the five boroughs but there are more showers coming our way from, uh, central New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania. There's still rain up the Hudson Valley, there's still rain in Connecticut, there's still rain on Suffolk County and eastern Nassau. So it's going to be a wet evening and a wet night, some of the rain heavy enough to produce street and highway flooding and a flood watch remains in effect for areas north and west of the city. Tomorrow morning will be rainy and windy. The rain will end around midday but the wind will continue to be strong and gusty all day tomorrow, upwards of 40 miles per hour, even higher. Slowly diminishing wind tomorrow night and Monday and Tuesday will be much nicer days with sunshine and temperatures back into the 70s. Right now it's 61 and mostly cloudy in Central Park, temperature tonight going down to 56.

Well, the flash flood watch continues until 11:41 this morning for pretty much all of the area west and north of New York City. We're seeing some urban and street and highway flooding even in and around the city as well as, uh, heavy rain is in the area and we have a flood warning for the Mahwah River up around Suffern, New York. So, uh, all kinds of, uh, wonderful stuff going on this morning with all of the rain and wind. We'll see things begin to abate this afternoon, the rain letting up, in fact it'll end by late this afternoon, the high 64. Windy, chilly tonight, down to 54. Tomorrow and Tuesday a couple of very nice days, a high in the mid-70s. Right now, some rain, 58 in Central Park. Repeating the current temperature 58 going up to 64.

And it's a forecast that contains rain once again. Another storm is, uh, moving across Missouri right now puttin' down a lot of water across, uh, Illinois and this system is going to be tracking due east the next, uh, forty-eight hours, moving across Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia, oh, but that's close enough and it's gonna deliver some rain here once again. Overnight, though, it's mostly clear and comfortable and Tuesday is a nice day with sunshine, uh, fading behind the clouds with a high of 70. Rain comes in tomorrow evening, continues rather steadily throughout the night, a low of 52. Wednesday, a cloudy, cool day with off-and-on rain and drizzle, a high of 63. And by Thursday, the system will be well offshore. The clouds will break for some sunshine once again and will warm things back up. 74 on Thursday. Friday partly sunny and 78. Currently 69 degrees, a clear sky in Central Park, the wind west at 7 to 14 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 69, going down to 56 in midtown.

Mostly cloudy for a time this evening. Partly cloudy overnight and no rain to talk about, for a change, a low of 58 degrees and, in fact, tomorrow will turn out quite pleasant with a good deal of sunshine. Noticeably warmer with a high near 80 tomorrow afternoon, although cooler near the beaches. Clear early tomorrow night, increasing clouds late at night, a low of 64. We're back to mostly cloudy skies Saturday, looks like showers and a thunderstorm or two during the afternoon, high of 72 degrees. Drying out on Sunday, and a mix of clouds and sun, high of 74, maybe a shower or two Monday and a high of 72. Right now 69 and cloudy in Central Park. 54% humidity, a west wind at 10 miles per hour, gusting to 18 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 69 going down to 58 in midtown.

Well, I just can't find anything bad with today's weather here, still lots of sunshine, temperatures gradually approaching 80 degrees midtown, cooler coastal Connecticut and on Long Island, of course, but, uh, even as we head on into tonight it stays dry. Clear skies will make way for more clouds after midnight. A low of 64 degrees midtown, 58 throughout the suburbs. That's not bad. Unfortunately if you're headed out and about over the course of the weekend, hey, it's the, uh, summer holiday season. 72 degrees with a lot of cloud cover tomorrow. Keep in mind you'll need the, uh, well the bubushkas, the ponchos, the, er, ra, well, the Paddington bear weather gear starting tomorrow afternoon and you know what -- all kidding aside -- late tomorrow, tomorrow night the possibility of flooding does exist with this nasty storm. Sunday could start off damp. Otherwise it turns partly sunny breezy high 76. Right now 72 Islip, 73 with the sun in Central Park. We'll manage 80 this afternoon in midtown.

A little cloudiness for the balance of the morning. This afternoon the clouds may break allowing temperatures to get into the mid-70s, to about 76. Clear tonight low

64. Tomorrow should be a sunny, warm day, high 82. A front now crossing the Plains states may trigger a couple of showers and thunderstorms during the day Wednesday, high 80, before that system moves offshore Thursday. That day should be partly sunny, high 78. Currently in midtown 60 degrees, the relative humidity is 75%, still cloudy, heading for 76 this afternoon.

Hey, it's a beautiful morning and it's gonna stay nice and bright and sunny all day long today and temperatures get to 80 and above from, uh, midtown on across the river and into adjacent New Jersey. It'll be a little cooler right at the shore but still nice and sunny. Tonight partly cloudy and mild with a low in the 60s. Tomorrow, more in the way of clouds and the humidity returns as well so there can be a shower tomorrow, maybe afternoon thunderstorms, high near 80. Partly sunny weather returns for Thursday, that should be a nice day, high 74 and then a shower possibility back into the scene for Friday and Saturday but right now it is 67 and bright and sunny in Central Park, humidity 62%, wind from the west at 9. Repeating the current temperature 67 going up to 82 today.

Well, James, dew points are well into the 60s at this hour around the region, that's an indication of how humid it is. Those high dew points will help fuel more showers and a thunderstorm around the tri-state as we head through the afternoon hours. Currently I see some showers north of the Tappan Zee and across a good bit of Connecticut but little rain across New Jersey. Our high this afternoon will approach 80. Rain at times and muggy tonight and tomorrow, even a thunderstorm or two, maybe even some flooding problems, the low 66. High tomorrow 74, cooler on Long Island and in Connecticut. Lots of clouds, maybe a little sun at times over the weekend but still a chance for a shower each day, especially Saturday, high both days 74. Right now 73 in White Plains and Islip, 74, mostly cloudy in Central Park. Relative humidity 81%, winds west at 5 miles per hour. Repeating the current temperature 74 going up to 80 in midtown.

And, what we have here is, uh, very humid conditions for the nighttime hours, uh, temperatures only dipping back into the mid 60s. Uh, it has been, uh, quiet on the WINS DopplerRadar, uh, we did have quite a bit of rain north of the city all day long and the rain is now starting to show up, uh, as to our southwest, this is getting into the, uh, Harrisburg, Lancaster area. Heavy thunderstorms out in Washington and Baltimore and it's all pushing northeastward toward us. Uh, we are expecting to see periods of rain late tonight and tomorrow, even a thunderstorm. Uh, temperatures tomorrow in the low to mid 70s. Tomorrow night, uh, leftover showers or thunderstorms and as we go through the weekend, uh, improving conditions. Saturday is a transition day, uh, we'll see clouds break for some sun but there still could be a shower or thunderstorm but Sunday should be partly sunny and 74 and then lots of sunshine on Monday. Currently cloudy skies 77 degrees, an east wind at 7. Repeating the current temperature 77, going down to 66 in midtown.

Well, our flood watch continues in effect until midnight for Rockland, Bergen, Essex, Passaic and Union counties but WINS LiveScan DopplerRadar not really showing much on anything out there. A lot of cloud cover, uh, there's the shower here and there along with the spot of drizzle, but 74 degrees. That's not all that bad. High humidity, temperatures running in the 60s, Long Island and Connecticut. Late this afternoon throughout the, uh, first part of the nighttime hours, this is our best bet to pick up a heavier thunderstorm. Later on tonight just be cautious about fog, low 68. But honestly, tomorrow's not much of a change. Clouds, a little bit of sun, still warm and humid, we're up at 80 degrees but still the threat of a shower and thunderstorm primarily during the midday and the afternoon. It's on Sunday that we finally dry things out with the high near 80. Right now it's 67 degrees Newark, 63 with the clouds in Central Park going up to 74 this afternoon in midtown.

Uh, gray skies tonight, humid conditions, areas of dense fog, drizzle. On top of that a coupla showers, even an evening thunderstorm, uh, right now we have some thunderstorms over southeastern Pennsylvania, working their way slowly northeastward toward us. Uh, temperatures, uh, steady. We're slowly rising, we're gonna be up in the middle 60s at daybreak. Tomorrow the, uh, frontal boundary, which is stalled on top of this, will have drifted back up to our north and on a southwest breeze, it's gonna be a much warmer day, 83 with the high temperature, uh, clouds, uh, little bit of sunshine, but, uh, another shower or thunderstorm is a good bet in the afternoon and evening. Uh, as one last wave of low pressure comes eastward from the Ohio Valley. Behind that we will finally build in high pressure for a few days, uh, Sunday will be partly sunny at 80. Monday and Tuesday lots of sunshine, temperatures in the upper 70s. Cloudy skies, 60 degrees in Central Park. 96% humidity and a northeast wind at 13. Repeating the current temperature 60 and holding steady or slowly rising in midtown tonight.

Yeah, that there is, uh, we have, uh, a couple of, uh, very strong thunderstorm cells north of the city right now. Uh, the, uh, closest one, eh, actually due north of the city – this is near the Tappan Zee Bridge actually or, or just north of there – and extends, uh, westward, uh, back into, well, right along the, uh, Morris, uh, Sussex county line, this will be north of Rockaway, uh, probably, uh, 6 to 8 miles to the north, northwest of there, uh, but a couple of those cells are extremely intense, uh, causing frequent cloud-to-ground lightning and, uh, some torrential downpours. Ah, the line moving towards the east, southeast at about 25 miles an hour, uh, so areas that are effected, it's it's going to be moving through much of Bergen county, uh, it will also be hitting, uh, much of central and southern Westchester country and maybe getting down into, uh, the Bronx, uh, it's probably going to take another, uh, twenty, twenty to twenty-five minutes or so for it to, uh, reach the northern side of the city. Uh, we do have a severe thunderstorm watch until 7 p.m. for all of, uh, New Jersey, uh, we'll call it a very humid evening, uh, with a couple of showers and heavy thunderstorms moving through the region late tonight, just partly cloudy. And then on the other side of this front some nice weather. Tomorrow, Monday, Tuesday, uh, it's not until Wednesday that we, uh, mention a shower once again. Currently 81 degrees with some hazy sun and a southwest breeze 8 to 16 miles an hour.

Repeating the current temperature 81 going up to 83 in midtown.

Those who were stressed by the fact that it's been dry for, oh, almost, uh, 18, 20 hours, uh, well, rest assured rain has returned. We'll have rain at times today and tonight. There's a flood watch through tomorrow morning for Morris, Warren, Sussex, Hunterdon, Somerset and Monmouth counties in New Jersey. Others may be added depending on how heavy the rain is tonight and tomorrow morning. Today's high 74, low tonight 64. And tomorrow and Saturday cloudy and cool, periods of rain, high 67 both days. Sunday ending rain in the morning will finally depart, give away to clearing, high 72 and much warmer weather next week. Currently in midtown with some rain, relative humidity is 89%. The air is calm. 68 degrees heading for 74.

James, there is rain around the metropolitan area now, uh, most of it to the west and north of, uh, Manhattan, but, uh, it will become more widespread and prevalent as we go through the day today. We'll have rain a good part of the time tonight and tomorrow and tomorrow night and into Sunday morning. Parts of our area could get more than 2 or 3 inches of rain, primarily north and west of the city and there is concern about flooding and flood watches are in effect. The atmosphere will begin drying out during the afternoon on Sunday and, uh, the Mets and Yankees have a chance of getting in Sunday night's game, not much of a chance we don't think, tonight or tomorrow. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday of next week, though, sunny and much warmer, well on up into the 80s. Right now 65 and cloudy in Central Park. Temperature today going up only to 68.

True artistry in the sky today. Sunshine, occasional clouds, going up to 76. Tonight palatable, clear, low 62 in midtown, the 50s in some suburbs. Tomorrow will be like it, easily, high temperature 78. And Friday shouldn't have any poor traits. Tons of clouds and sunshine, high 74 degrees. On Saturday, eh, we may see some grays. Mostly cloudy, windy, a chance for some rain, high 72. Currently in midtown 57, relative humidity 93%, wind out of the northeast at 3 miles per hour. 57 heading to 76 with sunshine today.

Beautifully sunny day today with a high pressure area in charge. It's going up to 78 this afternoon. Clear tonight, low 56 in some suburbs, 64 in midtown. Then tomorrow sunshine will be followed by cloudiness and the wind will start to increase in the afternoon. There's a storm off the Carolina coast that hasn't moved anywhere in the last several days, but as the flow aloft becomes southerly, it probably will come up the coast and that can mean some wind-driven rain at times on Saturday with a high near 70 and even Sunday somewhat questionable, although the sky could start to clear in the afternoon, high 80. Currently in midtown 65 degrees, relative humidity 67%, winds out of the northeast at 6 miles per hour and it's sunny. 65 heading for 78.

Huff and puff that it does but the wind is going to be relentless here, not just this afternoon, not just tonight, tomorrow and, to a certain extent, Sunday as well so keep that in mind. Some sunshine followed by thickening clouds this afternoon, otherwise high 72. It is dry, even this evening, we're gonna be a-O.K., but the problem is the rain comin' in a few hours after midnight. Then it's off and on during the course of tomorrow. Uh, our storm system's going to be weakening in the rain department. I guess that's the good news but when you factor in the wind, there's still going to be at least a minor tidal flooding and beach erosion. High tomorrow at about 70 degrees. Sunday's partly sunny, more humid with the high of 78 but don't you just note there could be a shower, thunderstorm kicking around. Right now it's 69 at LaGuardia, ditto Central Park, headed to 72 midtown.

Well, good afternoon Cheryl. It's a cloudy day in New York City and it looks like we're going to see the clouds, a little bit of rain and drizzle at times, just kind of a damp, cool afternoon with a gusty wind and a high around 70. It'll be cloudy and breezy tonight, with occasional rain and drizzle, low 68. Tomorrow mostly cloudy, humid, a couple of showers, could be a thunderstorm. Several dry hours tomorrow, though, a high of 78 and then for Monday, clouds will break for some sun at times. It'll be humid with a chance for a shower or thunderstorm and a high of 78. Right now we have a 68 degree reading at Morristown, 71 at Islip. Cloudy and 68 in Central Park.