EBOLA INFOCUS: FEAR, FASCINATION, AND THE GLOBAL RESPONSE TO PANDEMICS

You are invited to InFocus, a monthly conversation on today’s hot topics. As you know, Ebola is spreading throughout parts of Africa and at least one case is now confirmed in the U.S. This month’s conversation will focus on the emergence of pandemics such as Ebola, and our conflicting attitudes and responses to such crises. Dr. Heather Lindstrom, Research Assistant Professor, Department of Epidemiology & Environmental Health, UB will moderate the discussion.
A young Saudi girl enters her school's Koran recitation competition as a way to raise the money she needs to buy a green bicycle that has captured her interest. Her efforts at memorizing the verses impress her teacher, but when she wins the competition and announces her intention to buy the bicycle, her teachers have another idea what to do with the money.

Prof. Jeannette Ludwig, Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, will introduce the film and lead a discussion following the screening.

ASIA AT NOON: “VIOLENCE, TRAUMA AND RESILIENCE: EXPERIENCES OF CHILDREN FROM MUMBAI’S RED LIGHT AREAS”
Individuals, families and communities are embedded in socio-cultural, political and economic hierarchies that determine access to resources for survival and development. In India, these structural hierarchies pertain to stark gender, caste, ethnic, regional and income disparities. Familial socio-economic standing and the relative status of children within the family affect quality of life during childhood and life trajectories. Women in low-income prostitution in India are among the most disenfranchised groups in the country; preliminary research suggests that they and their children experience chronic violence. Yet, little is known about the children’s mental and emotional wellbeing. Further, while frontline workers allude to the ingenuity and courage these children display in coping with their realities, factors promoting resilience have not been measured systematically. This presentation shares findings from a study on exposure to violence, the presence of trauma symptoms and factors promoting resilience among 146 community and shelter-based children from two red-light areas in Mumbai.

Date:  Friday, October 9
Time:  12:00-1:00
Place:  Park Hall 280, North Campus
Presenter:  Shraddha Prabhu, PhD Candidate, UB School of Social Work
